Administration terms movie objectionable

The action had nothing to do with anybody's right to see or not to see a film

Because of objections to a 25-minute movie entitled "The Fly," the Associated Students cancelled the showing of four movies by John Lennon and Yoko Ono.

The films, a special production of the Genesis film series, were to have been shown last night and the night before.

Normally, the administration does not screen films brought in by the Associated Students. The action resulted from reading a fact sheet, which accompanied the films. After reading the fact sheet, Charles Keown, dean of student affairs, asked for a screening of the movie, and it was he who made the final decision to cancel the film.

"It ('The Fly') was extremely gross," said Keown. "But the action that was taken had nothing to do with anybody's rights to see or not to see a film. That's a matter for an individual to determine. We're not trying to protect the individual from something that he feels that he is entitled to judge for himself."

Of the four films scheduled to be shown on the program, "The Fly" alone was termed objectionable. But because the contract called for the program to be shown in its entirety, the whole program had to be cancelled.

The administration offered to call Genesis and get permission to cut it and to take responsibility for breach of contract, but A.S. decided to cancel the entire series. "We don't agree with censorship in any form," said Reginald Glass, vice president of the Associated Students. "Our policy is that if we can't present a program as it is, without somebody putting some type of censorship on it, we're not going to present it."

Keown, on the other hand, doesn't believe the matter involves censorship. "I don't really put it in the category of censorship," he said. "If the University hadn't had a part in this, we wouldn't have been involved in the ordeal of viewing this. The responsibility for bringing the series here rests as much with this office as it did with anybody."

Keown doesn't believe there will be any serious repercussions resulting from the decision to cancel the program, and doesn't feel that he will have to do such again.

Reginald Glass did say that as far as he knows, the regular Genesis films will be presented later in the spring. He said it is likely that all the films will be screened this time.

Resolution condemns action

A.S. reacts to 'censorship'

By ROGER MILLER

Associated Students yesterday reacted strongly to what it called "censorship of the Genesis film festival" by Charles Keown, dean of student affairs.

The resolution, which passed 24-4 with four abstentions, said, "Associated Students... denies the capability and right of the Student Affairs Office to use any form of censorship and in the future will strongly oppose such efforts on the part of the Student Affairs Office by whatever means necessary."

The resolution, co-sponsored by Pat Long and Albert Stith, did not explain the phrase "by whatever means necessary."

The series of four films by John Lennon and Yoko Ono were scheduled to be shown Wednesday and Thursday nights. They were cancelled Wednesday afternoon after Dean Keown objected to one of the films, "The Fly," a 25-minute segment of the series.

In the film which was termed objectionable by Keown, a fly was shown crawling over a nude female.

A.S. President Linda Jones said Dean Keown told her that he did not want to be a party to showing the film. She said Keown said he was perfectly aware that he was only one individual and that he was not trying to dictate morals and was not trying to decide who was mature enough to view the film.

A.S. objected to the "censorship" of "The Fly" and decided "as a matter of principle" to cancel the entire series.

A.S. said it would "assume no financial responsibility for breaking the contract" and "would not spend a cent."

Contracts for all activities and lectures must be signed by both Associated Students officers and the Student Affairs Office.

Stith said A.S. should go on record to object to "the foolishness and nonsense they push off on us." He termed it "madness" and added, "I personally won't tolerate it."

Several Congress members mentioned the possibility of seeking assistance from the Kentucky Civil Liberties Union.

Miss Jones said she would ask Keown to appear at the next A.S. meeting. Some representatives said they "would rather see him in court."

Congress approved a motion commending Miss Jones and Reggie Glass, A.S. vice president, for their efforts and asked that the Executive Committee check into the legality of Keown's decision.

Housing

Fewer students living in campus dormitories

By JACKIE CRAMER and STEVEN RUSSELL

Fewer students are living in dormitories this semester than have done so for the previous three semesters, according to figures released by Hubert P. Griffin, director of housing.

The dormitories have about 80 per cent occupancy, down 7.1 per cent from last spring, Griffin said, adding "The demand for University housing has not decreased. We've just opened up more space."

The 3,591 students living on campus this semester can be compared with 4,452 last fall, 3,780 in the spring of 1971 and 4,431 in the fall of 1970. Without Barnes-Campbell and Potter Halls the University has a total student housing capacity of 4,670, according to the residence hall figures in Western's Fall, 1970 catalog.

The 80 per cent occupancy figure does not include Barnes-Campbell Hall, Potter Hall and the top eight floors of Pearce-Ford Tower. Barnes-Campbell and Potter Halls are closed for renovation, while the top floors of Pearce-Ford are empty because the lower floors are sufficient to accommodate students living there. Griffin said the rooms in Pearce-Ford were being used to house guests of the University, including "a group from Oldham County Senior High School which was here last week."

Griffin told the Herald that he feels "university housing with few exceptions provides the best social and educational orientation to the academic community." He said the housing committee is "taking a hard, close look at every possible innovation" for improving dormitory life.

Students living in dormitories say they have seen both improvements and setbacks in dorm life during the last semester. The installation of refrigerators and study rooms have added to the students' comfort, while the mushrooming of nuisances such as bomb threats, 30 of which were reported in a two-month period last semester, has added to their discomfort.

Latin American Studies to sponsor international consultant's visit

By FRED LAWRENCE

Dr. John P. Augelli, dean of international programs and professor of geography at the University of Kansas, will be on the Western campus Monday and Tuesday. His visit is being sponsored by the Latin American Studies Committee.

While at Western Dr. Augelli will serve as consultant to the Latin American Studies Committee, with which he will meet Tuesday. He will have a luncheon Tuesday with administrative officials and there will be a public reception later in the geography department located on the third floor of Cherry Hall.

Dr. Augelli will deliver an address at 4 p.m. in Room 103 of the Garrett Conference Center. The talk is open to the public and is entitled "Latin America: Geographic Realities for Development and Modernization."

Dr. Augelli, who holds a Ph.D. from Harvard, is recognized as an expert in both geography and Latin American affairs. He is the author of more than 70 books and articles. One of them, "Middle America: Its Land and People," is used here as the text for Geography 454. Dr. Augelli formerly served as director of the Center for Latin American Studies at Kansas and at the University of Illinois. He is a past president of the Latin American Studies Association and the secretary of the Association of American Geographers. Also, he served several years as the secretary of the United States Committee of the International Geographical Union.

Former President Lyndon Johnson appointed Augelli to serve on the 12-member Board of Foreign Scholarships which makes the final selections in the international education exchanges of the State Department (Fulbright Grants). On numerous occasions he has served as consultant to the Ford Foundation, the state department and other national and international institutions.

'Zoo Story' set Saturday, Sunday

Edward Albee's "Zoo Story" will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at the Catacombs.

"Zoo Story" is an absurdist drama, a two-man play set in Central Park in New York. The actors are John Youngblood, a freshman theatre major, and Mitch Walker, a freshman music major. Both are from Madisonville. The play is directed by Brad James, a graduate student from Nashville.

The Catacombs is located behind the Newman Center and Lyddane Hall, at the corner of 14th and College Streets. Admission is 50 cents.

Theme of Miller's book

Land destruction may destroy people

By DOLLY CARLISLE

The devastation of our land and its effect on people are the central ideas in Dr. Jim Miller's new book of ballads.

Dr. Miller, a German professor in Western's language department, is the first poet to have material published in a series of Kentucky poems by Whippoorwill Press of Frankfort.

The new book, entitled "The More Things Change the More They Stay the Same," is the second book Dr. Miller has had published. It includes ballads about Kentucky people living in the ruins left by the coal industry. His first book, "Copperhead Cane" won an Appalachian poetry prize in 1967 from Alice Lloyd College. According to Dr. Willson Wood, head of the English department, "The poems in Miller's first book can easily rank with those of some of the major writers. As a writer of human relations, Miller is tops."

Dr. Miller has some definite ideas about the destruction of our land. He commented, "We are acting in a very arrogant way, with no thought about the future. Civilizations have been ruined because of devastation of the land. People who live in cities and suburbs just don't realize the connection between land and the people," he continued.

He thinks some of the problem lies with religion. "Our traditional religion has set us apart from the land, which is in contradiction to scientific knowledge," he said. "Our concept of God and what is sacred is not related to nature. Unlike the Greeks and the Navajo Indians, we think ourselves independent from the land. The Navajo thought the land so sacred, they would walk barefoot in the spring because of the delicate condition of the earth." He concluded, "This is in extreme contradiction to our actions today."

Dr. Miller grew up on a farm in Leicester, North Carolina. While attending grade school there he developed his interest in writing and became an avid reader. Dr. Miller can remember reading by flashlight under his bedcovers, and even now he panics at the thought of not having a book available to read.

Miller's interest in writing was intensified while he was attending college at Berea, where he was editor of the school newspaper and became involved with journalism. Since then he has had a number of poems published in magazines and journals. He joined Western's faculty in 1963 and received his Ph.D. in 1965 from Vanderbilt University. Dr. Miller is married to the former Mary Ellen Yates of Carter County who is a member of Western's English department. She also has had poetry published. Miller said he tries to divide the household duties equally with her so she can follow her own interests, which seem to be consumed by their three children.

When asked if he would like to become a full-time writer, his answer was a firm no. He replied, "For me teaching and writing complement one another nicely. Besides, I don't think I could undergo the pressure of writing continuously."

Dr. Miller's book is available in the Helm-Gravens library. Another book by Miller, "Dialogue with a Dead Man," will soon be published by Georgia University Press.

Herald, Talisman accepting applications for staffs

Applications for staff positions on the College Heights Herald and the Talisman are being taken at the Office of University Publications. Interested students may obtain application forms in Room 127, Downing University Center. Deadline for filing is Feb. 15.

Staff positions on the Herald and Talisman are open to all full-time students in good academic standing. They are not restricted to mass communications majors. As a practical matter, however, mass communications majors undoubtedly have an edge in training for the jobs, according to David B. Whitaker, director of university publications. Students may apply for the following posts on the Herald: editor-in-chief, managing editor, assistant managing editor, news editor, sports editor, feature editor, advertising manager, assistant advertising manager, advertising salesman, copy editor, photographer, cartoonist, and reporter. Many of the staff positions are salaried jobs.

On the Talisman, students may apply for editor, managing editor, photographer, section editor or copy writer. Some of the positions carry monetary remuneration.

The new staff of the Herald will take over no later than April 1. Talisman selections are for the next school year.

Publications advisers will screen applicants and make recommendations to the Student Publications Committee, which will make the selections no later than next month.

A.S., students vs. WKU

Was it worth it?

Quite a furor has resulted because of the Office of Student Affairs objection to a segment of the John Lennon-Yoko Ono films, which resulted in the Associated Students cancellation of the showings originally set for last night and the night before.

Dean of Student Affairs Charles Keown viewed the films early Wednesday morning after reading the fact sheet which accompanied the films. It seems that he was offended by an "extremely gross" segment entitled "The Fly."

Keown found the films objectionable not only because they were obscene, but because the film lacked any cultural, educational, or socially redeeming values. Probably many would disagree on this point, though.

By his actions, it would appear that Dean Keown has taken it upon himself to play father to every student on the Western campus. Many students were taken aback by the announcement that the films had been cancelled.

Legally, Keown had the right to halt the showing of the films. A.S. was not the only group to sign the contract. Both Ron Beck, from the Office of Student Affairs, and a member of Associated Students signed the contract. Therefore, if the student affairs office deemed it necessary to cancel the showing, it had every right to by law.

But the question still remains as to why the student affairs office signed the film contract to begin with. One wouldn't sign a contract to buy a new car he had never seen. Why did Beck sign a contract for a movie he knew nothing about?

But everyone makes mistakes. And the student affairs office did not stop at one. Why did they wait until the morning of the first scheduled showing to preview the film? The Associated Students has incurred a sizable debt through advertising and promotion due to the cancellation of the film.

Surely the Office of Student Affairs does not expect the Associated Students to pay off these debts. After all, if the Office of Student Affairs was the co-exhibitor of the film, and they were the cause of its cancellation, then they should at least assume the debts incurred because of its cancellation.

This incident has resulted in nothing except moving the student body farther from the administration. It would be better for all concerned if the two groups were continually becoming closer, but incidents such as this make it an improbability.

In the future, both the administration and the Associated Students should be sure they understand the situation before they announce their plans publicly.

Announces counseling project

This is to inform readers of the College Heights Herald that women's liberation at Western does NOT mean four women enrolled in the Army ROTC program!

Last semester a Women's Rights Commission was established under the Kentucky Civil Liberties Union at Western. This semester a Problem Pregnancy and Abortion Counseling Project is starting. The project will include information and counseling about birth control, pregnancy, and legal abortions. PPACP's are operating successfully in Louisville, Lexington, and Murray. We feel Western is long overdue. A speaker from the Louisville PPACP will be here sometime before spring break to help us get started and to train counselors.

Since women's liberation and, more specifically, problem pregnancies certainly involve men as well as women, we hope any interested people will respond by contacting us for more information.

Backs basketball team

This letter serves as an invitation to all WKU students to join the bandwagon of Hilltopper fans who are dedicating themselves to do everything possible to see that Western repeats as OVC basketball champions.

Our team was not mentioned as a strong contender for the championship in the pre-season standings. However, our players have demonstrated a tremendous desire to win, and in the process find "the Big Red Machine" at the top of the league.

As fans, we can give our team the boost that is sure to be needed when the time comes for Morehead, Eastern, and Murray to invade Diddle Arena. Morehead and Murray will seek revenge. Eastern will seek the championship. Let's get behind this ball team and give them the vocal support they deserve! Remember how fun it was watching the Toppers on television during the NCAA tournament last year? It is not entirely out of reach this year. The conference title is the first step. Our conference games are away until Feb. 19. Until then we'll be sitting next to the radio as the Topp travel to Tennessee to play East, Middle, and Tech. When the 19th gets here let's have the arena packed with people, a lot of cheer, and a lot of red towels! I, for one, want the team to know that I'm behind them all the way.

Wanted to see Lennon films

I applauded the Associated Students for their plans to show the films by John and Yoko Ono Lennon. I thought it was about time that Western was exposed to something cultural.

I was furious to learn that the Administration cancelled the exhibition of the films. Also, I was slightly stunned at the thought of seeing "The Adventurers," an R-rated monumental piece of excrementitious trash at the Center Theatre.

John and Yoko Ono Lennon's films have been critically acclaimed all over the world, proving that they have artistic value. "The Adventurers," on the other hand, was made purely for the exploitation of sex. Even the author, Harold Robbins, claims that he writes for the money, not critical approval.

Do Western's administrators consider "The Adventurers" a better method of making money than the Genesis Film Festival? Would they rather roll in the profits by peddling pornography disguised as creative cinema, rather than proudly showing the works of inventive film makers in the name of culture? Probably the first choice is the best answer.

Roger Phillips

Disappointed at film cancellation

We were really looking forward to seeing the John Lennon-Yoko Ono film selection and we assumed other students on campus were too. We feel that by the time a person enters college he is usually at least 18 years old and supposedly mature enough to make decisions for himself. He should have the opportunity to decide whether or not he would like to view certain films since he is spending his time and money.

Films made by different people and about different subject matter can add tremendously to one's education. The John Lennon-Yoko Ono film selection had aroused many students' curiosity because of John's and Yoko's musical background. Since this was an exclusive showing, the majority of WKU students will never have the chance to see it. Why is it that certain people have the right to determine what a whole student body has the opportunity to see?

Furious at film cancellation

Who is this "uptight-shortsighted-narrow minded hypocrite" who censored the Lennon-Ono films?

Who is this "tight-lipped-condescending mommy's little chauvinist?"

I think I know who this hatchet-man is. Are you the man Lennon is sick to death of?

Thinks Western neglected

One aspect of news reporting, especially in the Louisville area, has always intrigued me. I have written several times to the largest newspaper in the Louisville area asking why Western Kentucky University never gets the coverage the other Kentucky teams do. I have gotten no reply and thought maybe you could help me find out why Western is a loser even if it's a winner.

I always thought that sports as well as news should be given equal coverage. I realize that the University of Louisville would tend to get a little more coverage than the other Kentucky schools, but why should schools like the University of Kentucky get eight column coverage when they lose a game, while on the other hand Western wins and has only one small column. This favoritism has infuriated me for a long time and I just wanted to see if you could find out why Western, in the eyes of the Louisville paper, is a loser even when it's a winner.

Freshman legislator Boone making his presence known

By KIM WEAVER

A freshman legislator, George Street Boone (D-Elkton), is losing no time making his presence known in the House of Representatives.

For one thing, he attended a Louisville hearing on abortion. None of the other 99 members of the House of Representatives put in an appearance, although all had been invited.

Boone, 53, is representative of the 16th District made up of Logan and Todd counties.

An alumnus of Vanderbilt and Columbia universities, he has been named to the influential Education Committee.

Boone is a co-sponsor with Rep. Nicholas Z. Kafoglis (D-Bowling Green) of a bill that would prohibit any governmental agency of the state from carrying out public business in a closed or secret meeting.

Discussion of public business, as well as any action on it, would have to be in meetings open to the public. Meetings attended by a majority or quorum could be held only after "full and timely notice to the public."

Anyone attending a meeting in violation of the bill could be punished by a fine of $500 or imprisoned for six months or both. Boone was one of three representatives chosen to present a House resolution on air-quality standards to the state Air Pollution Control Commission. The resolution, also adopted by voice vote in the Senate, affirms support of such standards as were adopted by the commission in 1970.

Rep. Boone is also a co-sponsor of HB 115, which would benefit children of a member of the armed forces held prisoner of war or missing in action, in addition to children of permanently and totally disabled veterans. Tuition at any state-supported vocational school or institution of higher learning would be waived for such persons. The measure fixes a limit of three years on such tuition-free schooling.

The bill was originally sent to the House Committee on Education, given a favorable recommendation by the committee, given two readings on the floor of the House, then referred to the Rules Committee. Finally the bill has been sent out of committee, voted on in the House and sent to the Senate. HB 115 has been referred to the Senate Education Committee.

Boone, a freshman legislator, co-sponsored HR 15 to "honor, commend and thank Dr. Carl P. Chelf of Western Kentucky University and other members of the orientation faculty for efforts of great benefit to freshman legislators and the 1972 General Assembly".

The resolution was also sent to Boone's Education Committee, given its second reading on the floor of the House and sent to the Rules Committee. The bill has now passed the House and has been received in the Senate.

A bill to increase the number of teacher trustees from three to four and add a retired teacher trustee to the state Teachers' Retirement System Board of Trustees has been sent to the House Education Committee. HB 224 is co-sponsored by Boone. A House resolution requesting the Kentucky Turnpike Authority to remove the raised median on the Western Kentucky Parkway has been co-sponsored by Boone. The resolution is HB 36.

A bill relating to motor vehicle usage tax, HB 232, has been referred to the House Appropriations and Revenue Committee. The bill is co-sponsored by Boone.

A resolution expressing sympathy over the death of former Rep. Lawrence Watts has been adopted in the House by voice vote. HR 37 was co-sponsored by Rep. Boone.

A House resolution has been co-sponsored by Boone to "Congratulate Trooper Henry C. Shipp of the Kentucky State Police for outstanding service and to the Commonwealth." HR 30 would direct presentation of the resolution during a session of the House.

And a resolution commending "Bobby R. Shouse and John W. Smither of the Frankfort Fire Department for exemplary conduct" has been adopted by voice vote in the House of Representatives. HR 33 is co-sponsored by Boone.

Host Dayton Monday night

Western's OVC

Coach Jim Richards' Western basketballers, co-leaders of the Ohio Valley Conference, travel to Middle Tennessee tomorrow night to take on the Blue Raiders, whose unexpected 10-5 record (3-3 in the OVC) has caused quite a stir around the OVC. Game time is 7:45 p.m.

Coach Jimmy Earle's Blue Raiders, a pre-season pick to finish deep in the depths of OVC standings, have already made believers of their critics. They have victimized conference foes East Tennessee (74-68), Tennessee Tech (66-55), and, last Monday night, Austin Peay (54-50).

Hilltopper basketball players called 'fundamentally unsound' by Boston's Auerbach

By JERRY POTTER

It may come as a surprise to loyal Western basketball fans, but the Hilltopper program produces fundamentally unsound players who are poor pro prospects.

At least that's the opinion of Red Auerbach, general manager of the Boston Celtics, and Bob Ryan of The Boston Globe. Together they combined on a column in The Globe earlier this season, that took Clarence Glover, a former Western standout, to task over his poor play and branded all Western players as "fundamentally unsound."

"Thoroughly unschooled in the fundamentals of basketball, possessor of a poor shooting touch and unfamiliar with man-to-man defense (he played a one-man roving zone in college)," wrote Ryan. "Clarence simply isn't an NBA prospect."

Glover along with Jim Rose were the Celtics' top two draft choices last year. Rose, an all-OVC guard on last year's team, was dropped from the team during pre-season drills and Glover was kept largely because he was signed to a two-year no-cut contract and therefore could not be released from the team.

"I'd be lying if I said he wasn't at least a year away," Ryan quoted Auerbach as saying. "The thing that bothers me is that if he had come to camp ready to play, even with his deficiencies, he would be better off now. He spent all summer thinking about how great it was going to be playing pro ball, instead of getting ready for it."

"One lesson the Celtics learned from this," wrote Ryan, "was to avoid Western Kentucky ballplayers in the future. 'It amazes me,' sighs the Redhead, 'how fundamentally unsound they (Jim Rose, too) were, especially Glover.'"

Johnny Oldham, now Western's athletic director and the man who coached both Glover and Rose, had little comment on the situation other than to explain how Glover, a little-known prospect before the NCAA tournament last spring, was drafted so high by the Celtics.

According to Oldham, Glover was drafted following a three-way phone conversation between

The Blue Raiders refused to attack Austin Peay's zone defense and used a slowdown offense to break the zone and secure the victory.

Herman Sykes, a 6-0 senior guard, is Middle's most consistent performer. He is averaging nearly 19 points a game. Assisting him are his backcourt running mate Jim Drew, a 6-3 junior, and 6-10 pivotman Chester Brown, both reliable double-figure scorers. And, Nick Prater, a 6-3 forward, has been turning in some very good showings lately.

The Hilltoppers spent the past weekend dealing out defeats to OVC rivals Austin Peay (106-73) and Murray (71-70). The victory over Murray, coupled with an East Tennessee win over Eastern vaulted Western into a league-leading tie with Eastern. Both schools own 4-2 conference records.

"Togetherness is the No. 1 key to our success," said Richards. "We're playing together now, as we should, and because of it we're getting far better shots and we're shooting better."

"We're also playing far better defense," he continued. "And we're playing with more confidence so we're beginning to believe that we can play."

A tight pressure defense, a 52-per cent shooting average from the field, and improved floor play were the more notable ingredients of the Hilltoppers' weekend achievements. Jerry Dunn, Jerome Perry, Tony Stroud, and Rex Bailey were particularly impressive. Dunn leads Western statistically, averaging 19 points and 11 rebounds a game. And, Perry's play recently has all but erased thoughts of the knee injury that has hampered him all year. Perry is now averaging 11.6 points a game.

The Hilltoppers return home to Diddle Arena Monday night to entertain perennial power Dayton in a non-conference contest.

Coach Don Donohue's streaking Flyers, 9-8 on the season, have registered seven victories in their last 10 games.

Dayton, in a rebuilding year, gets the bulk of its point production from four sophomores and a junior, including 6-8 Kentuckian John Von Lehman of Covington. Don Smith, a 6-0 sophomore guard, leads the Flyers' attack, scoring 18 points an outing.

Top swimmers host Sewanee

By JERRY POTTER

Western's swim team hosts small college power the University of the South of Sewanee, Tenn., tomorrow at 2 p.m. in the Diddle Arena pool.

"They've had fantastic records down through the years against bigger, more powerful schools," noted Hilltopper swim coach Bill Powell. "They have a winning record against Vanderbilt and Kentucky and they have beaten teams like Georgia and Alabama in the last few years. In fact, they've beaten practically all the Southeastern Conference schools at one time or another."

Tomorrow should be a real test for Western's tankers, who are now 5 and 4 in dual meets this year. Powell personally thinks there will be several "real good races."

Two of those races should come in the 50 and 100-yard freestyles, which pits Western's Rick Yeloushan against Jamie Griggs of Sewanee.

Rick Baranyi, a freshman breaststroker

Both Yeloushan and Griggs are natives of Tampa, Fla. and both have competed against each other before. Last year Griggs won both races against Yeloushan. So far this season Griggs' best times at the two distances are a 22.4 in the 50 and a 49.2 in the 100, which Yeloushan has covered in a 47.7 clocking this winter.

Aside from Griggs, Sewanee has two other top swimmers in Lawrence Wilson and David gambléd on Glover, supposedly a defensive whiz and obviously a rebounder."

Auerbach also said in the story that he "... wasn't sure that the other guys (i. e. Rowe, Dana Lewis and Kenny McIntosh) would be that much better."

So Glover was drafted. He wasn't the first Western prospect to play for Auerbach. Dee Gibson and Don Ray were the first. Both Gibson and Ray were members of Auerbach's Tri-Cities Black Hawks in 1950.

"I think it's a very untrue statement," said Gibson, who is now the director of auxiliary enterprises for Western. "I'll say Western basketball players, both past and present ... certainly will not fail because of coaching techniques."

"The thing that bothers me about this," Gibson said later, "is that its a reflection on Mr. Diddle and John Oldham."

"The modern players like Clem Haskins and Tom Marshall are probably two of the most fundamentally sound players that ever played the game," Gibson pointed out. "Our 1948 team had four of its five starters playing pro ball. Each one was considered fundamentally sound and all were actually considered the top defensive players in the league."

Indeed there have been several former Hilltoppers make the grade in the pro ranks. In addition to Marshall, who played at Cincinnati, and Haskins, now of the Phoenix Suns, there was Caryle Towrey who led the old Ft. Wayne Pistons to a national championship in the early '40s.

In fact, Gibson's knowledge of Western players, both past and present, leaves him in a quandary over Auerbach's statements.

"If Auerbach didn't believe in Western players, why did he make them their No. 1 and 2 draft choices?" Gibson asks. "Nobody forced him to."

"When Western recruits a player who proves that he cannot work into our system," Gibson continued, "we don't blame the high school or stop taking players from that school. We shoulder the

Some students disregard 1973 lottery numbers

By APRIL ELLISON

Persons who were born March 6 or 7, 1953 and also don't care for Army life, probably are not satisfied with this year's lottery to choose the 1973 draftees since they received numbers one and two respectively. July 23 received number 365 in Wednesday's lottery.

The lottery affects about 2 million men nationally and almost 1,500 Western students, most of which are freshmen. Among those interviewed, there seemed to be only slight apprehension about actually being drafted; some believed that President Nixon's proposal to create a volunteer army would be enacted. Others had confidence in their relatively high lottery numbers. Tom Young, a freshman business major from Chatsworth, Ga., whose number is 80, thinks that he may be a borderline case.

For previous lotteries there were predictions as to what was a "safe" lottery number to have, but this year Selective Service personnel refused to predict what the cutoff number will be.

The cutoff number, after which men will not be drafted, depends on whether a volunteer army will replace the draft and what the military's man power needs will be for next year. If the manpower requirements remain the same as they are now, men with numbers over 100 probably will not be drafted.

Some military manpower specialists are expecting a high draft call for next year. Since no one is being drafted the first 3 months of this year and draft calls are expected to remain low throughout the summer and fall before the Presidential election, it might be necessary to have large calls early next year in order to maintain manpower requirements.

Previous lotteries were held in late summer or early fall, but this year's lottery was held earlier in the year so that those persons who are affected might have a better idea of how their draft status will figure in their future. However, most men who will turn 19 in 1972 graduated from high school in 1971 and have already made plans for their immediate futures.

on buying used books were determined by manufacturers, and often the Bookstore was forced to change prices without advance notice. Childress said the Bookstore operated on a 10 per cent net profit. In addition, Childress said he would appear in Congress some time in the future to answer questions students have about the Bookstore. One Congress member mentioned the possibility of contacting other state colleges in a effort to combine their efforts to pressure publishers to lower prices.

EVEN AFTER FINDING the right book, finding the information can prove to be more of a problem. But Danny Belcher, a senior from Glasgow, is making an earnest attempt in the Helm-Cravens Library.

Powell's swimmers host University of the South

Brandon Wilson, who was the most valuable swimmer in the College Athletic Conference last year, specializes in the individual medley and the backstroke.

Brandon, the CAC champ in the one and three-meter diving, will be a stern test for Western's Bob Shaw. Brandon and Shaw met last year with Brandon winning both events. But Shaw has been one of Western's most successful swimmers this year and Powell says "it'll be close."

As a team, Powell thinks his tankers are doing about as well as he expected. "We're doing about as well as I had thought we would," said Powell. "We had a couple of bad days (against Ball State and Central Michigan and in the Vanderbilt Invitational) but that's to be expected from any team."

One pleasant surprise for Powell has been the improvement of Tate Nation, a freshman freestyler from Liverpool, N.Y. Wednesday morning Nation swam the 200 freestyle in a 1:56.2 clocking, which is three seconds better than any of his previous times in the event.

University Press director to visit

Bruce Denbo, director of the University Press of Kentucky, will be on campus Friday, Feb. 11 to discuss manuscripts and publishing ideas with interested faculty members. He will conduct his interviews in the Memorial Room of the Garrett Conference Center. Appointments should be made by calling the office of Dr. John D. Minton, vice-president for administrative affairs.

Auerbach knocks ex-Toppers

blame ourselves."

Shouldering the blame—that's probably what Auerbach is trying to make Western do. For what he did was shell out a bundle of money, upwards to a half-million dollars, for Rose and Glover and, as of now, he hasn't received much in return.

If there is to be blame or responsibility for the situation it should be Auerbach and not Western who accepts it. Auerbach was told by Oldham exactly what Glover was—a good defensive player and a good rebounder, but a poor shot. Actually what he told Auerbach was nothing that most Western fans didn't already know. For at Western Glover was known and respected not for his play, but for the unorthodox manner in which he did things. Oldham himself has said that he took no credit for anything Clarence did on the court.

So what Auerbach has done is make an investment that won't give any returns for some time. It was his decision and he should, as Gibson said, "shoulder the blame" and not cast it off on Western.
